The droughts reducing crop yields in some of the world's largest grain-producing regions this year elevated both food prices and concerns about hunger and malnutrition around the world. The world faces the looming challenge of feeding an expanding population that is expected to reach 9 billion by 2050, from just over 7 billion today, while climate change is increasing uncertainty for farmers.

Four Steps to Feeding the World in 2050

We have developed four scenarios, or pictures of what the world may look like in 2050. The thirty-year timeframe is long enough for the scenarios to differ substantially from each other, and also reflects the planning horizon of governments and regulatory bodies, and hence companies.
